“...they really just want you to be honest...”

When did you begin applying?

I started pretty late around February

Which platform did you apply through for this job?

Through Northeastern's portal

Number of rounds: 1

Round 1

Role of interviewer in the company: Principle Software Engineer

Questions asked by interviewer:

1. Talk about my personal projects
2. Asked me if I could improve on it now (make the end result more optimist) what would I do?
3. One of the subjects I had mentioned in my resume which was Risk management (How I would go about doing this)
4. Explain stacks and queues
5. If I knew about Cloud services to which I replied with instances where I used it and how I went about using it
6. Few technical questions which I honestly did not know the answer to and I was upfront with him that I did not know about it
7. Why I chose this role and this company to which I talked about how necessary it was in this day and age

Questions I asked:

1. Learning curve
2. What are the opportunities they provide to their interns?
3. How do they usually contribute to projects,etc?
4. I also asked about being able to look at what different teams are working on

Duration before the offer mail: about a week

Final thoughts

I feel like they really just want you to be honest about what you know and don't know because they are willing to give you the space to learn. So,they are just looking for the willingness or enthusiasm for the role.

The interviewer was very kind and made me feel very comfortable during the process and guided me through.
